San Miguel Island Closure

In the interest of public safety, the U.S. Navy is closing San Miguel Island until further notice due to recent concerns of possible unexploded ordnance. San Miguel Island was an active bombing range from WWII through the 1970s.

San Miguel Island is owned by the U.S. Department of Defense and is managed by the National Park Service under a memorandum of agreement.

Pursuant to the Authority of the Superintendent under the Code of Federal Regulations Title 36 section 1.5 San Miguel Island is closed to all public entry.
